I vote Yes. Here we go again. More vicious election rhetoric. More extreme positions. More campaign commercials telling us how great the other guy is and how terrible we are. Maybe it's time to put our differences aside, meet halfway, and find out the truth about what's best for South Korea. Many of the policy choices for South Korea were made by the previous administration and government. Many of them are good. Many of them are also great. Particularly I would like to focus on proposals for public education, employment, housing, and infrastructure. The first and most important is public education. The education system in South Korea is excellent. Teachers are highly respected. Students graduate with almost perfect scores on a standardized test. High school graduates take a nationally administered test to be admitted to a university. Competition to get into the top universities is fierce. The problem is that it is extremely expensive. The system is wonderful for the people who have the means to attend and graduate from schools, but it is a luxury for the vast majority who don't. What I would like to do is ensure that all students, regardless of their means, are able to access education. The same administration recently announced that they want to build a new high school. It's a good plan, but it's very expensive. It will cost tens of billions of dollars. Many people are afraid that it will be wasted money and that it will just serve to increase inequity between rich and poor. However, there is a proposal that would allow every South Korean student access to the new high school. It would be funded by a giant lottery. If you don't win the lottery, you can't get into the new school. It's basically a lottery for tuition. That's crazy talk. But it shows how much potential South Korea has. First the liberals, now the conservatives, are accusing the other side of corruption. Liberals accuse conservatives of corruption. Conservatives accuse liberals of corruption. It's getting ridiculous. I'm just going to assume that everybody's pretty ethical. Everybody is for the greater good, right? That is our fundamental goal as human beings. I'm not going to step into the middle of all this stuff. I'm just going to focus on the policy and on the plans that would actually make “Text” – DEY Dey is the latest millennial turntable sensation making waves on the afropop scene. With his latest track “Text”, Dey is making resonating music without breaking a sweat. In the music industry, art always means nothing without a business strategy. Which means even if you have an artistic vision and the skills to create music, the market needs to fall in line. Furthermore, it needs to create more value than what you're actually delivering. This is exactly the case with Dey. With his exquisite and breathtaking art, which is mixed and mastered by funky afro beater Jungleboi, Dey is on a mission to take off and inspire. Jungleboi's production is impressive and Dey's vocal tone isn't faltering at all. Jungleboi's influence over Dey's music is apparent, from the high notes of his vocals, to the progressive tone of the tracks. Jungleboi's high pitched ringing voice echoes throughout the tracks and with the help of his production skills, Dey's vocals are left to tell his story and to captivate the listener.
