CAD modeling/dwg file formats AutoCAD supports a number of file formats for storing and exporting drawings. AutoCAD 2010: Project File Format (Project file format): A CAD drawing is composed of objects, which can include other drawings. The objects are connected by lines or arcs. Each object is called a "project" and is represented as a drawing in the Project file format. Block Data Format (BDX): CAD drawings are composed of blocks of information, which define the geometry of the drawing. In AutoCAD, each block is stored as a file, and, when imported into another application, can be treated as a single CAD drawing object. AutoCAD 2000 to 2004 supported the following file formats: PDF: The Portable Document Format (PDF) is a file format for representing 2-D vector graphics, created by Adobe Systems. PDF files are generally compressed for faster downloading. PDF is used as a delivery format in Web browsers, such as Microsoft's Internet Explorer, and Mozilla Firefox, and as an output format for many computer graphics programs. DXF (originally Data Interchange Format): Data Interchange Format was the first standard for exchanging drawing data in CAD. DXF is often used to exchange drawings between CAD programs. For instance, Revit files are supported by other AutoCAD programs. DWG (Data Interchange Format): Introduced with AutoCAD 2.0, this file format is used by Autodesk for drawing exchange. DGN: Introduced in AutoCAD 4, this file format is used to store 2D vector objects, including lines, arcs, circles, polylines, polylines, text, and images. The dgn file format was originally developed at The University of Manchester. AutoCAD 2005 to 2012 supported the following file formats: DWG: Introduced in AutoCAD 2005, this file format is used by Autodesk for drawing exchange. DGN: Introduced in AutoCAD 2004, this file format is used to store 2D vector objects, including lines, arcs, circles, polygons, polylines, text, and images.
