Peroxidase, glucose-6-phosphatase, adenosine triphosphatase, lactate dehydrogenase, glutamate oxalacetate transaminase, glutamate pyruvate transaminase, phosphate dikinase, and nonspecific esterase were cytochemically demonstrated in paraffin sections and cytospun specimens of liver biopsy specimens from 30 patients with suspected or known liver disease. Comparisons were made by calculating the percentage of stained cells and activity of each enzyme in such specimens and in those of normal livers. The results showed that within the limitations of this study, glucose-6-phosphatase activity may be a useful cytochemical marker for liver disease.Q: What's the origin of "drunken sailor"? I was listening to a song with the lyrics: I want to find a drunken sailor And I want to drink with him tonight Then you tell me What I
