Lobago, US sailors set sights on long-distance swim A pair of US Navy SEALs are on a long-distance swim to thank the city of Lobago in northern Chile. Cpl. Raymond J. Wency, 38, and Sgt. 1st Class Andrew D. Campbell, 27, both of the Naval Special Warfare Development Group, will swim 10 kilometers (6.2 miles) from Navarino Island, off the Pacific coast of Chile, to the fishing village of Lobago on the nearby Chiloe Archipelago, on Thursday. They will arrive a day before the upcoming Independence Day holiday in Chile, and hope to break a record for the longest open-water swim in South America, according to a statement from the Marine Corps. The last Marine swimmer to cross from Navarino Island was in October, completing a 441-mile traverse with others. And, in a leg of the 2004 Pentagon-funded Swim Across America, a trans-Pacific swim from San Diego to Hawaii, the Marine Corps' lone swimmer, Marine Lance Cpl. Michael R. Gazzles, completed the 5,100-mile journey in 52 days, 20 hours and 52 minutes. His accomplishment was the basis of a documentary movie, "The Longest Swim," released in 2007. The two Navy SEALs have been training for nearly six months. "I'm going to tell stories of our culture, our history and the people we've met along the way," Wency said in a statement. 6d1f23a050
