â€¢ JavaScript, DIV IDÂ . pdf Â Dutta-JanaÂ Â .Q: Do I need an air line to change pool filter? I have a pool that is very shallow. When I drain the pool, I need to have a large hose connected to a pump on the side of the house. When I fill the pool, I can do it directly from the hose. Do I need an air line? What would it get me? What will cause problems? A: The air line would be for the air pump. When you're draining the pool you want to make sure the air pump and filter are on at the same time so you're able to use the pump without having to drain the filter first. When you're filling the pool you could drain the pool down to 3 or 4 feet before adding water to ensure you don't leak pool water into your house. The race is tighter among early primary voters than in past elections, especially in the once-solid Republican stronghold of Indiana. Trump and Clinton, as well as their top surrogates, are campaigning hard for the state's 49 percent of GOP voters, far outpacing expectations. The Republican presidential front-runner's team is making it clear that Indiana could help determine the outcome of the race — and the contest for the GOP nomination — right up until election day. Take a look at Trump's recent visits to Indiana, as well as his new ad, and Hillary Clinton's new ad and visit, to see what exactly he is doing to try to win over those voters.Q: How do you use jQuery to parse a variable value out of an input element? I have a quick question. I have a variable, say $name, that gets filled out and is later turned into an input element. The variable, name, could be $name, John Doe, Joe Smith, Jim Smith or any other variable. What I want to do is check the value of $name against the strings of the various input fields and delete the empty fields. I am using the following jQuery: $("#delete[type='submit']").click(function(){ var delete_title = $(this).attr('value'); $.ajax({ type: "GET", url: "ajax.php", data: "delete_title="+ delete_title, success: function(response){ if (response == "success"){ $('input:text').each(function(){ 6d1f23a050
