The A101 is the only USB powered device that contains an A/D and D/A converter on board, without the need for an external voltage or current-limiting resistor. In addition, there is a built-in resistive audio balancer circuit that automatically provides the 50/60 Hz ripple correction whenever the A/D converter is enabled. When you open this raw in a raw converter they may automatically apply their own capture sharpening thus double sharpening the file as DXO has already applied capture sharpening. It's also worth bearing in mind that DXO will apply a varying amount of lens sharpening (capture sharpening) across the frame to match the specific lenses sharpness characteristics ie. more sharpening towards the edges. This double capture sharpening may be the reason for some of the over sharpened comments.
