another aspect of rfactor 2 we wanted to improve upon this month is how the ui handles multiplayer server lists. weve heard loud and clear from our community the desire to irradiate ui blocking when waiting for favourite servers to load or even when reviewing the full servers list. at the point of launch for the new ui, this was a feature hard coded into the system, which presented a significant amount of work to remove in such a way as to retain stability in the way servers are displayed. that said, we have begun to invest the time and resource into both removing the requirement to wait for favourite servers to load, whilst also adding the possibility to load server lists (internet, lan, favourites, friends) asynchronously. what this means in reality is, players no longer have the waiting message load up and block the ui on the race tab, and should you click on the multiplayer tab the servers list will load servers in such a way that you can see the list populating, and engage with the list even before it has fully loaded introducing a much reduced wait time when looking to take rfactor 2 online. each month in these development roadmap posts we attempt to share a little insight into some activities and developments we are working on behind the scenes with rfactor 2. due to the level of complexity of game development, and the many varied states of either bug fixing or feature improvements we are working on at any given time, with the software, sometimes the amount of information we feel able to share with the wider public can vary in its detail. this can be for a number of reasons, some related to our confidence on getting round to starting / finishing any given piece of project work, through to certain aspects of development having a longer lead time than others, often meaning that key areas of improvement can roll over into consecutive months, especially if some of the necessary background work that needs to be undertaken is often behind the scenes, and doesnt produce something that will affect the game play experience of the public in general. 5ec8ef588b
