while the netatmo weather station can be used to monitor any place in the world, the access point is only compatible with the netatmo smart wifi, netatmo smart n (1.0 version), netatmo smart n (1.1 version), and netatmo smart h (2.0 version) wireless routers. and while some of the other features are useful, the netatmo weather station really shines when it comes to ease-of-use. it provides plenty of options for customizing the experience to your specific needs. for the average consumer, the netatmo weather station is probably perfect, since it provides all of the basic features one might want in a weather station. its robust feature set makes it a great option for someone who wants to monitor a number of different locations and has the financial means to do so. so far, the only negative aspect we can come up with is that netatmo could have done a better job of providing a public api, since the netatmo weather station could potentially be connected to a large number of weather stations. weather stations with data-collection rates slower than 15 minutes are less accurate because they give you more data than you need, peters said. and after setting up your station, be sure to take a few minutes to regularly use it for several weeks to give the sensors time to adjust to your local conditions. the american red cross recommends putting a weather station in the shade and away from doors and windows, but if you can't do that, it's better to position it in a spot that doesn't get direct sunlight. you also want to make sure that you don't have metal objects in or near the sensor.

api, and is supported by a growing number of apps. the main disadvantage of the netatmo weather station is its inability to provide a live weather forecast. while the station has an internal weather data logger, it doesnt have the processing speed to pull data from multiple sources. instead, netatmo recommends that you get the netatmo weather app for ios or android devices. this allows you to view and store a forecast for up to 10 days, and you can also get alerts for rain, wind, and temperature. the
