steinberg have also released cubase native vst version 7.1 (free), this is the same base version of cubase 7 that you get for free when you buy the full version of cubase. you can download it from steinbergs website. tried to install cubase vst5 on my xp machine (which has an lpt port for the big blue dongle) but it wouldnt install. i contacted steinberg telephone support where a nice man told me to destroy my lpt dongle and send a photo of it i got a cubase vst5 activation code for my elicenser within half-an-hour. slightly disappointed with the material but it was a great trip down memory lane. -choose product-cubasis project importerdemo projects (cubase and nuendo)ddp playerexpression maps for vst expressiongroove agent one drum mapssound contentsteinberg activation managersteinberg application installer toolsteinberg download assistantsteinberg library managersteinberg eucon adaptervideo decoder for avid dnxhdwallpapers i dont know who these people are but i love this kind of story. cubase is very expensive for small studios and musicians. i dont know any other software that costs this much. i dont know who this guy is but his site sounds like it is made by a music producer. i mean ilok is a good idea but you cant get cubase licenses for free just like that. i would love if steinberg introduced a license with cubase for free but it would be of no use because it is a very expensive software. im not a musician so i dont know what i am talking about.

look, theres no way i can imagine to ever carry or manage one dongle all the time. thats just stupid. the only time i use it is when i have to record a client. and im not there all the time. i would need the dongle to be in front of me, or i would need to go to places where i might have the dongle with me. both are not an option if theres a deadline, a client or a teaching assignment. thats the point: you cannot carry or manage one dongle all the time. you have it with you when you need it and you do not use it. no, no, no, no, no, no, and that doesnt even include the fact, that despite all the recent noise, every single one of the things that were lost or damaged in spite of having the dongle with you are just rare and you have to be very unlucky. using one dongle all the time is not more or less safe than not using it at all. and theres a lot of other reason why it would be stupid, even as a user, to carry one dongle all the time. most of the elicensers are software devices that now cost money. theres a lot of software that is being distributed in cheap packages from the internet, including the dongle. in addition to that, theres a lot of hardware that can now do a lot more if not protected, including for example recording professional sound cards and mixing multiple devices in live (that is, first plugging in your microphone and then suddenly plug in your devices. if we dont want to change the way software is distributed, then obviously a lot of things have to be done. a lot of illegal practices are in the making by now, since nothing has ever been done. 5ec8ef588b
