During the mission to raid the vault, members of the team must race to destroy the bombs while they still can. The clock starts ticking down when the bombs are placed and stops once the last bomb is detonated. The Bombs are usually hidden in the floor of a room, usually in the ceiling. The bombs are arranged to cause as much damage to the players as possible, and are best avoided. The safest way to destroy the bombs is to simply destroy the floor to which they are attached. The floor is "detonated" as soon as the bomb is destroyed. If any of the bombs are left un-detonated, and the player stays in the room for a long time, the bomb will explode once the timer has run down. This is more dangerous than the normal bombs, and some players will leave the room immediately after setting off a bomb. BOMBS There are three types of bombs. The first, and simplest, is the wall-falling bomb. The second is the bombs with attached ropes that plummet down onto the players. This is the most common type of bomb, and is generally the safest. The bomb is attached to a rope that loops around the ceiling. If the bomb is not detonated, the bomb is normally harmless to the player. The third, and rarest, is the bomb with attached chains that plummet down on the player. The chains tend to be slower to fall and can cause the player to be trapped between two obstacles. The chains have a mechanism on them that makes it very difficult to disarm the bomb. In some cases, the chain can be removed from the bomb by putting a stick on the mechanism. The bombs' primary damage is the wall the bomb falls on. The rock that is usually mounted on the ceiling above the bomb can be detonated, causing massive damage to the room and pulling the bomb down. Usually, the player can wait for the bomb to fall and detonate the rock at the last second, and it is generally considered to be the safest option. However, if it falls into the line of fire of any objects that the players already have in the area, it will explode without the player's intervention. ATTACHMENTS Attached to the bombs are various items. The items are usually items the players are hoping to find in the vault. The items themselves may also be of some benefit to the players. In general, the more dangerous the item is, the better it is
