I have created a form with a login and password validation. I have the following PHP code that redirects the user to the login form if he has submitted an empty form: if (empty($_POST)) { header('Location: login.php'); exit(); } However, when the login and password fields are filled and the user presses the "submit" button, it doesn't redirect to login.php. I have added a button: "Submit" and have tried the following PHP code in order to redirect the user to the login.php page. $query = "SELECT * FROM user_database WHERE email='$email' AND passwd='$passwd'"; $result = mysqli_query($con, $query); if ($result!= null){ $row = mysqli_fetch_assoc($result); if ($row['email'] == $email && $row['passwd'] == $passwd) header('Location: index.php'); } } The code seems to be working fine, but the problem is that when the user has already logged in, and goes to another page, it redirects him to the index page again. How can I fix that? Thanks! A: Just store the login credentials in a session when the user is logged in: if ($result!= null){ $row = mysqli_fetch_assoc($result); $_SESSION['email'] = $row['email']; $_SESSION['passwd'] = $row['passwd']; if ($row['email'] == $email && $row['passwd'] == $passwd){ header('Location: index.php'); } } You could also store the user ID in the session, that way the login page won't re-display if the user is already logged in. Then, you can check if the user is logged in in any other page:
