Filerunner Filerunner is a file searching and searching application that is ideal for the Windows 95/98 user who requires a fast and easy way of scanning and finding documents, web pages, or anything else in their computer. Filerunner saves you time and effort as it automatically scans your documents and generates search menus that can be accessed directly from the menu bar. Using the Filerunner's powerful database engine, even non-indexed files can be added to Filerunner's database of files and directories. This means that the program will be able to find both documents and files that are hidden. The program's intelligent search engine uses all your computer's resources to the best of its ability and it can open your computer files as if you were searching through a physical file card index. This makes it ideal for files with names that are not intuitive, or for locating files that have names that sound similar to others. Filerunner's unique search system also enables you to create your own customized search menu that can be used whenever you want to search the entire hard drive. Indexing and storing files for future reference is also an essential part of Filerunner's technology, and as each file is indexed, it is also stored in Filerunner's database. The program stores up to 10,000 files, and even documents and images that have been deleted from your hard drive still remain in the database. The program's powerful built in indexing engine includes things like postal address, phone number, and even dates for search purposes. So files can be kept organized even when they are long since deleted. Filerunner's powerful search features, including the ability to find files by name, date, size, type, 2edc1e01e8
