Your camera's physical shutter speed setting is called either shutter speed or time, and it describes how long you are allowed to take a photo. A shutter speed of 1/1,000 is often called 1 stop. Shutter speed in older cameras was often measured in 1/1000 of a second. Earlier professional cameras were capable of recording time values as low as 1/100 of a second. When you take a photo, you decrease the velocity of the shutter. You can use Photoshop's Camera Raw software to normalize the camera's shutter speed setting, change ISO settings, and create different type of sensitivity to a photo. Choosing a different shutter speed is a simple process using camera Raw: Open the button on the Mac keyboard. Open your image in Photoshop. Choose Develop > Adjustment Layers > Camera Raw. Click the shutter speed slider to select it, and use your mouse to move the slider up or down As previously mentioned, Adobe Photoshop offers a camera adjustment layer adjustment. Object Preset Tool, a couple of exciting new Audition Preset features, a revamped Image Enhancements tool, and more.
